Jarqo‘rg‘on district is taking significant steps toward empowering young people, encouraging innovation, and creating broader opportunities for future generations. An open dialogue led by District Governor Ilhom Saparov brought together talented and ambitious youth, local officials, and sector leaders to discuss education, technology, entrepreneurship, and the future development of the district.

The meeting was attended by the district prosecutor, sector representatives, and officials from various organizations, creating a direct and transparent platform for communication with young citizens. The event highlighted the district's growing focus on supporting youth initiatives and integrating modern technologies into local development strategies.

One of the most impressive moments of the dialogue was the presentation session organized by young participants. Talented students, young entrepreneurs, and IT enthusiasts introduced innovative startup ideas and technology-based projects aimed at solving social and economic challenges. Presentations covered areas such as artificial intelligence, robotics, mobile application development, digital services, freelancing opportunities, cybersecurity, and IT-based employment solutions. Young innovators also proposed projects focused on improving educational infrastructure, expanding sports opportunities, and creating vocational training programs for local communities. Their forward-thinking ideas demonstrated the rising intellectual and creative potential of the youth in Jarqo'rg'on district.

District Governor Ilhom Saparov emphasized that investing in young people means investing in the future of the nation. He noted that today's rapidly changing world requires modern knowledge, digital skills, and innovative thinking.

— “Today we witnessed once again how talented, educated, and ambitious our young people are. Their ideas, creativity, and determination are the driving force behind the future development of our district. We want our youth not only to succeed locally, but also to become competitive on the international stage. Supporting innovation, education, and entrepreneurship among young people remains one of our highest priorities,” — said District Governor Ilhom Saparov.

During the open dialogue, several issues raised by participants regarding education, employment, sports facilities, and entrepreneurial support were addressed immediately. Responsible officials were instructed to provide practical assistance for promising startup initiatives and youth-led projects. Special attention was also given to expanding opportunities in IT education and digital professions, enabling young people to work in international freelance markets and global technology sectors. Officials emphasized that modern professions and digital skills are becoming key factors for economic growth and youth employment.

The event served not only as a platform for discussing problems and proposals, but also as a strong example of constructive cooperation between local leadership and young citizens. The open dialogue reflected Jarqo‘rg‘on district’s commitment to building an innovation-driven future where youth play a central role in social, economic, and technological progress.
